Your choice we know better than you

A detailed photograph of various fresh meats and vegetables. In the foreground, there are several large pieces of raw meat, including what appears to be a lamb leg and some sliced meat. To the right, there are slices of cured meat, possibly salami or ham, along with a yellow bell pepper, a red bell pepper, and a green chili pepper. The background is a dark, reddish-brown color with a white curved shape in the upper left corner.

INFRASTRUCTURE

At International Market Al-zoya Meat plant have advanced facilities for keeping the buffalo meat in optimum conditions. Over the past year, Al-zoya has discussed the opportunities and challenges facing the local meat industry with meat producers, processors, and others involved in the meat value chain. Over and over again, we've heard that one of the core challenges facing the meat industry in the region is the regulatory environment, specifically as it relates to the regulation of small processors. At the gathering, we explored these issues in detail. We are backed by a Strong distribution network that enables us to provide time bound and safe delivery of products. Supported by this we have the approved plant number issued by APEDA (Agriculture Processed Foods Products Exports Development Authority) Ministry of Commerce, Government of India.

OUR AIM

Our aim is to supply the highest quality of meat and meat products from around the world to our customers in accordance with their specific needs and wishes. To provide premium quality meat at wholesale prices direct to both trade & public.

OUR EXPERTISE

With our expertise in muscle foods, we assist the meat and seafood industries with a broad range of quality issues and new product opportunities, from improving color and tenderness to value adding and extending shelf life

OUR ACHIEVEMENT

For a number of years, we have been grappling with a decline in turnover caused by customers drifting away. We believe that they were most likely beguiled by descriptions of meat purporting to be similar to ours. It is much easier (and more profitable) for supermarkets, butchers and farm shops to sound like us than to be like us. With 10 years of huge achievements behind us and with the meat industry improved dramatically, we believe that the honorable thing to do is to pull up the stumps and head back to the pavilion. All debts are paid and we have endeavored to see our staff redeployed into new careers of their choice.
